Interviewing Applicants

Ask students to devise a list of famous people; they can be real life, or fictional (one of them should be Dylan Thomas).

Then, ask students to devise a list of jobs.

Students must decide which person they would give each job to, and be able to explain why.

Encourage students to consider the qualities each person has that would make them suitable for a particular job.

Some students might find this task easier if the people and / or jobs were already listed for them.